In July we with our older kids decided to wear masks even before the last mandate was enacted. Fully vaccinated, we all still got covid in August, and we were told it was not uncommon. So now we STILL wore masks even when said last mandate was withdrawn a few weeks ago. We made a choice, a choice others should be fully able to make. If you research CDC numbers, about 3/4 of the population has had covid the past 2 years. 3/4 of the eligible population has been vaccinated. Is there a number we are waiting to reach? An end goal? At this point there is no end in sight, hence the pushback.
