Honored Commissioners: "You shall not steal. You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor... You shall not covet what belongs to your neighbor..." -- from the Ten Commandments, Exodus 20, Torah/Law of Moses. U.S. Constitution Amendment V's last words echo that legal witness again Charles County's government as well, which my testimony in person May 1, 2018 still asserts -- review it. Jesus Christ also said "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." To the extent you all show no mercy in taxation policy, and in an election year, it's folly to expect mercy at the polls. You have time to repent, nothing more -- especially of the lie advanced by Dr. William Kirwan, et al that more funding will fix schools when school administration fails to recognize the schools' worst problems are moral, not fiscal. Not even the Washington Post's editor believes Dr. Kirwan on that anymore, published October 27, 2019 (read the attached PDF of editorials). If schools need more funds for teachers, take that from the administrative budgets. Mike Lukas was kind to vote against raising the school superintendent's salary when teachers need the cash. Raising everyone's taxes when a well-published county budget surplus exists -- and that in a time of rampant inflation, when Dr. Kirwan's ill report on government schools proves raw thievery before COVID lockdowns made matters far worse than what my May 1, 2018 in-person testimony confronted. Commissioner Stewart: Whether you give me the time of day or not, I ENJOYED silencing the inept, undertrained, discourteous black-shirted Education Association of Charles County (EACC) with the simple math of how much their covetous demands alone swallow most of the county budget. More parents despise the EACC today, long overdue for a stern, repeated rebuke. They, employers and other taxpayers weary of that agency's chronic grand larceny the Commissioners need to hold accountable. Stop your theft, please. -- DSE
