Charles County has lost farmland at an alarming rate during past 50 years, while tripling its population. The current board of County Commissioners are wise and discerning. They can see that the future of Charles County will continue to add more people. They also understand that when a home is built on a farm field that it will end the production of food on that land. The Commissioners also understand that the recent Covid pandemic disrupted the normal distribution of food and that locally grown food became vitally important. The Commissioners are wise enough to know that intensive development produces more than homes. Issues like crime, wastewater, traffic, impervious surfaces, the need for more schools, more police, and crowding arise. The Commissioners are also wise enough to realize that none of these negative issues exist on farmland. Please continue to be wise and protect our County from sprawl development. Thank you.
