I find out it outrageous that citizens cannot enter the Dept. of Public Works Building. I was made to stand outside for 15 minutes trying to explain a complicated road matter to someone over the phone. By contrast, entering the main gov't building is a welcoming experience and there appears to be no concern about "safety and health" as there is with the excuse that Public Works uses. My belief is that the doors are locked so that employees won't be "bothered" by the public who are there to get answers to questions. The citizens pay the salaries of these folks and are treated as if they aren't entitled to even enter the building. I hope that the Commissioners will correct this user unfriendly and ridiculous excuse of a policy. It's amazing to me how one individual (the head of Public Works, Mr. Harris, can decide on his own to close off a government building to taxpaying citizens because he can.
