I believe that people are really seeing what teachers do every single day now that schools have been forced to close during this crisis. I have heard from so many families how much their children miss coming to school and seeing their teachers, and how appreciative they are of the things we do every day now that they are implementing much of the provided instruction at home. I see teachers working so hard every day to reach their students remotely, and although I know that there are many concerns with the budget during this crucial time, I feel that we need to continue to provide teachers with the resources they need to provide quality instruction.
