Schools are already overcrowded and so is pretty much everything else. Without any plan for funding or additional schools this will be a nightmare for our public education system. As a high school teacher who already regularly has 30 or more students in her classes, we cannot manage such a surge in population. We don't have enough teachers or space to take on more students. We already have several floating teachers with no classroom of their own (and we get more every year) and not enough in the budget to get the adequate amount of teachers in my department. If there are no plans to approve the BOE's budget in the future (which you didn't last year and screwed the teachers as we didn't get our step) then this county will lose the teachers they already have, have overcrowded and have lower performing schools. Lower performing schools have direct correlation to higher crime, is that really what we want for our county? Think about it. It's more than just the money you make from building, it's the effect it will have on the community as a whole.
